EXPLORE CREATE COLLABORATE

Week 1: Paper Model Dreams with Russell Kahn

July 8-12 | 9am-12pm (12 Children Maximum)

Dive in with inspiration from the interactive installation Dreams Can Come True, by Tectonic Industries! This week's art making invites young artists to create a series of interactive sculptural explorations. We'll create "dream worlds" in a diorama setting using a variety of paper and geometrically inspired model making approaches. Join us for the mini-exhibit to interact and appreciate the artworks on the last day!

Russell has been an educator in public schools and Indian reservations for more than 30 years. His projects reflect a multicultural perspective and his passion for creating. He teaches ceramics, printmaking, drawing, and painting at Camden Hills Regional High School.

Week 2: A World Imagined with Tara Morin

July 15-19 | 9am-12pm (12 Children Maximum)

Inspired by the work of Dan Mills, young artists will use maps and collage techniques to push the boundaries of real and the imaginary. Meld landscapes, and combine places to create new imagined landscapes from mixed media and paper maps. Working both independently and collaboratively, young artists will design mixed media artworks depicting countries and landscapes of their own.

Tara is an artist and educator living in Rockland, ME. She began her teaching artist work in Chicago at both the Hyde Park Art Center and the South Chicago Art Center and now serves as the K-8 art educator at Appleton Village School. Her approach to art making and art education emphasizes process and play.

Week 3: What Is A Painting? with Marcie Jan Bronstein

July 22-26 | 9am-12pm (12 Children Maximum)

An image, a surface, a window, a playground... We'll spend five mornings exploring paint, surfaces, and many ways to create paintings*. With inspiration from the work of Ann Craven and other artists throughout history, young artists will make a collection of painted pieces that reflect and reveal their own unique way of seeing the world. Throughout the week, we'll create a journal of painted sketches and ideas. *One day will be devoted to painting birds...

Marcie is a visual artist whose work has been commissioned, published, collected, and exhibited for 30 years. For the past 23 years, she has lived and worked in Belfast, teaching in schools and workshops, creating books and works of Public Art. From 2011-14, she developed and guided the ArtLab at CMCA. For the past five years, she led creative watercolor painting workshops on ships around the world.
